

As a new amateur radio operator it is my belief removing the simple 5 words per minute Morse Code requirement would be a major mistake by the FCC. Even though some of the world countries have eliminated this from their requirements I believe the FCC should keep the rules the way they are. Morse Code is part of amateur radio and removing it will only bring the dummying down of amateur radio. Also not every country in the world has removed Morse Code. To remove Morse Code would make it more difficult for people with different languages to communicate. Morse Code is a world language onto itself and removing it would be an atrocity to amateur radio.
